You can easily boost your photos by applying multiple filters and color enhancement effects. The only thing you cannot do is automate masks and selections. But, that's really not a requirement for most folks. However, what is a requirement, is a very intuitive user interface, and Color Efex Pro gets it right. It's the first photo editing program I've seen where I don't have to worry about using any of the controls. I simply load my images, choose a filter and move on. The automation happens behind the scenes and allows me to just focus on the creative process. I can zoom in or out, pan, and zoom around, and none of it breaks my flow.
